

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of molding a plywood board, and plywood board manufactured therefrom, comprising the steps of: providing a plywood board; conditioning the plywood board with water; disposing the conditioned plywood 5 board in a contoured mold press having first and second platens; and deforming the plywood board in the mold press using sufficient heat and pressure to form a molded plywood door skin having contoured portions simulating panels.